

Pumpkin Panic

JEngA: Jonah Andrews, Eric Burkholder, Jackson Ginn, Mia Silver

Overview

Pumpkin Panic offers an action-packed 2D shooter experience for players of all ages. Once you hit play, you'll find yourself in the middle of a pumpkin patch and you'll be playing as the scarecrow named Herbert. Your job as the scarecrow is to maneuver left and right and shoot seeds at the incoming crows that will be flying towards the four pumpkins in the pumpkin patch. Each pumpkin can only take 3 hits from the crows and then they'll disappear, but if you hit a crow with a seed the crow will immediately disappear. Additionally, there are powerups that fly across the screen alongside the crows. Shoot at anything that moves across the screen to see what mysterious effects may take place should you hit your target. The two powerups you may find are pumpkin plus and clear screen. The pumpkin plus powerup will add back one pumpkin to the field and the clear screen powerup will automatically clear the screen of all the crows currently headed towards your precious pumpkins. The point of Pumpkin Panic is to see how long you can defend your crops from the dastardly crows.

How to Play

The controls for Pumpkin Panic are rather simple. You may use either the "A" and "D" to move the scarecrow left and right respectively, or you may use the left and right arrows to enact the same movement. Furthermore, a simple left click is all that is required to shoot your seeds at the crows. The seed cannot be fired at an angle, instead it will fire straight down starting from the position that you fired it at. The seed has to travel to hit the crow or powerup, so you need to be precise and time your shots.

Winning and Losing

The only way that you may lose the game is if there are no more pumpkins left in the pumpkin patch. As soon as the last pumpkin has been hit by its third crow, then the scarecrow crumbles and the game is over. As a result, the way to “win” this game is to try and survive for the longest amount of time. In theory the game is infinite if you prove to be a top tier scarecrow sniper.